Remote Learning Report

Forest Park School District 91

At Field-Stevenson Intermediate School,

we are definitely in a better place with remote learning than we were last spring. Effective training, improved schedules, and the utilization of Google Classroom and other online platforms have given our educators the confidence they need to teach remotely. That said it is still not easy.

On the one hand, remote learning has certainly brought our teachers and staff together, encouraging them to collaborate and share ideas as they assist one another to improve the overall learning experience at every grade level. On the other hand, remote learning has absolutely helped our parents to appreciate the tireless efforts of these dedicated men and women who deliver quality educational instruction every single day, remotely or in-person.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank our parents for helping make remote learning at Field-Stevenson a real success story. Setting daily routines and providing unwavering parental and caregiver support are essential ingredients for creating an effective learning environment at home. On behalf of all of us at Field-Stevenson, we truly appreciate your efforts.

Sincerely,
Principal Dr. Tiffany Brunson
